

Why did I look to Mustard Seed Homes, again?

In a recent interview with a returning resident the question was asked, "Why did you look to Mustard Seed Homes again?" These are his reasons and a few others:

This was the place where I felt whole for the first time in my life. I was on the path back to being the me I hate and dragging the ones that mean the most to me down with me. I was becoming my father, the one thing I vowed never to become, at least the bad things of him. I remembered how much I felt loved and heard that I wasn't judged for the things which I did in my past. I remembered feeling whole and wanted and a part of a family. I hoped that you, my spiritual family, would want me back and that you hadn't given up on me. I hoped for that feeling of wholeness. I hoped for grace. I decided to come back where I felt like I belonged. I did not want to just "sit time", but figure out what is wrong with me, for my sake and the ones I love. I am tired of hurting and of hurting the ones I love. I have found grace here. You may have been disappointed in my actions, but you still care and love me. You are not here to condemn me, but you actually have my best interest at heart. I have found an opportunity to become the best me.

We know God is the God of second chances. He knows how often we as individuals need to go around the mountain. He is always there to give us a course correction. He's always there to help us become a part of the family.
